‘However ...’

Editor:

Thank you for publishing the excerpt from Kaitlin Reed’s book Settler Cannabis: From Gold Rush to Green Rush in Indigenous Northern California (Black Snakes, July 6). It’s good that Native people are giving their perspective on “settler-colonial destruction” of their ancestral homelands. However, the piece contains this incorrect statement: “... the tragic 2002 fish kill that left 70,000 dead Salmon rotting along the banks of the Klamath River was caused by a collision of cultures that began when the first ships landed on the east coast of North America in 1492.” This misinformation reinforces the Whitewashed American history we all learned in school, which is that Christopher Columbus “discovered” North America.

Columbus arrived at what is now the Bahamas on Oct. 12, 1492. His second voyage took him to Cuba, Santo Domingo and Jamaica, and on his third and fourth voyage he traveled to the coasts of eastern Central America and northern South America. Columbus never saw or set foot on North America. He was an extremely violent and brutal man, even by the standards of his time. For these reasons, Columbus Day has been justly renamed Indigenous Peoples’ Day.

Maybe not an Obvious Choice

Editor:

The comic in the July 6 NCJ shows two prospective students staring at the CSU system’s rising tuition while the Earth is gesturing toward a list of the countries with free or low-cost education. At first glance, you might think the pair should obviously pick from the Earth’s list, but a closer look might change your mind. I use the European schools as the basis for comparison as they comprise seven of the nine countries listed.

European and CSU bachelor programs are not equivalent. Most European universities offer three-year focused programs unlike CSU programs that are broader in scope but on average take four years. Further, the European schools may have a greater demand due to their low cost, which can result in larger classes. These days, obtaining an education in English should be no problem.

Examining the CSU system, you’re likely to get a more rounded education due to the extra year and wider availability of electives. Also, you’ll have lower travel expenses by staying in California.

Surprisingly, the free to low-cost tuition isn’t necessarily the advantage it seems. According to an April 2023 CSU financial aid report of the 2020-2021 academic year, due to scholarships and other financial aid, approximately 18 percent of CSU undergraduates pay full tuition while 22 percent pay a partial amount and 60 percent have their tuition fully covered, which is equivalent to a student in the tuition-free countries.

So why can’t U.S. universities offer low-cost degrees? Primarily it comes down to funding. All the European countries have a value added tax on products and services ranging from 19 to 25 percent, as well as peak income tax rates between 45 and 55 percent, except Norway at 38 percent due to a petroleum subsidy. It’s doubtful such rates could fly in the US.

PlanCo Approves Permits to Tear Down Schneider 'Dream Home'

Developer agrees to donate $164K property in lieu of $3.6 million in penalties

By Thadeus Greenson
thad@northcoastjournal.com

After an emotional apology from the developer, the Humboldt County Planning Commission voted unanimously July 6 to approve the permits and permit modifications necessary for Travis Schneider to tear down his partially constructed family mansion overlooking the Fay Slough Wildlife Area.

After amassing a host of permit violations during construction of the more than 20,000-square-foot home on Walker Point Road — including one that jeopardized Wiyot cultural resources and another that crucially put the project in the California Coastal Commission's jurisdiction — the property has been under a county stop work order since December of 2021 and a notice of violation issued in April, carrying fines of $40,000 a day for up to 90 days.

Seeing no other path forward, Schneider has agreed to tear down the foundation and framing already constructed on the house, remove the up to 15,000 cubic yards of fill dirt brought into the property and restore it to its natural grade. On July 6, after a fairly brief discussion, the planning commission approved the permit modifications and special permits necessary to do that, along with conditions that require the work be done by the end of next July.

Schneider has also agreed to seek a lot-line adjustment, which will require coastal commission approval, that will leave the archeological site — a well-preserved, pre-contact Wiyot village first documented in 1918 — entirely on one of the property's two parcels, which will then be conveyed to a third party to be held for the three local area Wiyot tribes. The remaining parcel would carry no entitlements, meaning if someone wanted to build a home on it, they would need to start the permitting process over from the beginning.

Planning Director John Ford told the Journal that conveyance of the property with the archeological site was agreed to as part of a compliance agreement to settle the code enforcement case the county had brought against Schneider stemming from pervasive violations. While Schneider had faced fines and penalties of up to $3.6 million, Ford said those will be forgiven.

"The dedication of the property is in lieu of the payment of penalties," Ford said. "No additional penalties will need to be paid. There is a charge for staff time."

According to county records, the parcel in question has an assessed value of about $164,000.

The lone person to speak before the commission during public comment, Schneider first addressed two specific issues with the agenda item before the commission. First, he requested a bit more time to do the required work, expressing concern it would be difficult to complete by the initially proposed deadline of October. Then, he said he believes the county's figure of 15,000 cubic yards of fill dirt is inaccurate, wanting to correct the record and saying he'd only brought in 3,000 to 5,000, which he said he'll remove. Schneider then did something he hadn't yet done publicly: apologize.

"I'm sorry and I want to apologize to all those who have been affected by this project," he said before a lengthy pause and continuing, his voice cracking with emotion, to recount how he's always wanted to improve Humboldt County and thought his family's "dream home" would "contribute positively to the surrounding landscape."

"I believe the conditions agreed upon herein allow this community to heal and move forward," he said. "While I had hoped for a different outcome, I'm confident this ... will bring peace and healing to those that we've hurt."

The county issued a stop-work order on construction of Schneider's family home on Dec. 27, 2021, after it was determined he'd built on a footprint different than the one on approved plans and thus encroached on mandated wetland setbacks on the property. Additionally, Schneider was found to have violated his permits by clearing an environmentally sensitive habitat and grading over a known culturally sensitive Wiyot site, while also cutting an unpermitted temporary access road on the property. Schneider defiantly continued construction activities for 50 days after issuance of the stop-work order.

The issue came to a very public head in August, when Schneider's application for permit modifications needed to resume construction came before the Humboldt County Planning Commission, and the Wiyot Tribe, Blue Lake Rancheria and California Coastal Commission objected, saying additional details needed to be finalized concerning Schneider's remediation plans before the project could go forward. The entities' opposition set off then Planning Commission Chair Alan Bongio, who launched into several rants in Schneider's defense and made far-reaching comments about "Indians," accusing them of trying to extort more concessions out of the developer and playing a "game" with cultural resources and reneging on an agreement — comments tribal officials found deeply offensive and racist.

In the aftermath of that meeting — in which the planning commission sent the matter back to staff to try to find an accord — a litany of other permit issues and violations were revealed, including that Schneider had begun construction on the project without a building permit, that he'd failed to get a septic permit required before he began construction and, perhaps most importantly, that he'd brought in 10 times more fill dirt and had begun construction of a residence more than twice as large as allowed under his coastal development permit.

It was later learned that Bongio had done concrete work on the project in 2019, according to Schneider, which Bongio had failed to publicly disclose when attempting to resolve the permit violations as a commissioner. (Bon-

New Federal Program Aims to Strengthen MMIP Investigations

By JoVonne Wagner/Indian Country Today
newsroom@northcoastjournal.com

The U.S. Department of Justice recently announced plans to address the country's Missing and Murdered Indigenous Peoples crisis with new, nationwide initiatives aimed to increase cooperative investigations.

According to the department's press release, the Missing or Murdered Indigenous Persons Regional Outreach Program allows departments from various levels of government, including federal, state and tribal, to collaborate and share resources used to address Missing and Murdered Indigenous Peoples cases across the country.

The regional outreach program dedicated five assistant U.S. attorneys alongside five MMIP coordinators to help ensure issues within the crisis will be communicated directly with the U.S. Attorneys offices. The announcement comes on the heels of the U.S. Marshals Service launching a pilot program in February with the Yurok Tribe to develop tribally-led collaborative partnerships to address the MMIP crisis.

Since declaring a local emergency on the crisis in December of 2021, the Yurok Tribe has been at the forefront of regional, statewide and national efforts to bring attention to the crisis and resources to address it. Last year, the tribe hosted its first annual Northern California tribal summit on the issue and was successful in getting a Feather Alert bill passed into law, setting up a statewide notification system for MMIP cases.

Vanessa Waldref, the United States attorney for the district of Eastern Washington, said this new DOJ program is designed to offer tailored services to each specific region.

"Our efforts are gonna be to both work with our state partners to ensure that we are focusing our efforts on the individuals that are critically important to be found, as well as if there's a homicide, making sure that we're doing all we can to investigate and prosecute cases that are appropriate to do so," Waldref said.

According to the DOJ press release, the program will also allow for investigations on MMIP cold cases.

Monty Wilkinson, the director of the executive office of the United States

Attorneys, said in the press release that the office is committed to the effective prevention of and response to MMIP cases through collaborative efforts.

"We will work together with all relevant federal, tribal, state and local law enforcement partners to locate missing persons and solve crimes where they have occurred," Wilkinson said in the release. "This new program will allow the department to build upon the work done by individual United States Attorneys' offices and ensure continued support to those offices by coordinating outreach regionally on MMIP matters."

The new outreach program's workforce will be housed across the district offices of Alaska, Arizona, Eastern Washington, Minnesota, New Mexico, Northern Oklahoma, Oregon, South Dakota and Western Michigan.

Waldref shared her appreciation of the partnership with the DOJ program, emphasizing the department's initiatives on bringing solutions to the forefront of the missing persons problem.

"We really wanna be a leader in addressing the MMIP crisis, and I'm really encouraged by the energy by the Department of Justice to have this issue be a priority and to have to commit the resources to address the needs of our tribal communities," Waldref said.

Although some data collecting and information won't readily be available to the general public, Waldref said it is important to highlight cases the U.S. Attorneys' Offices are working on and move them forward.

"The goal of this program is to really provide that additional connection to the public and show the Department of Justice's commitment to this issue," Waldref said.

Gregg Peterman is the first assistant U.S. attorney for South Dakota and has worked with the state's Indian Country for the past 29 years. He will work with Troy Morley who is the recently appointed tribal liaison for the great plains region, which encompasses South Dakota, North Dakota, Alaska, Wyoming and Nebraska.

"Troy and his colleagues around the country who were also selected for the position will bring to the job a certain level of expertise, skill, years on the job, and extensive background prosecuting violent crime in Indian country on reservations," Peterman said. "We work very well with our colleagues in the surrounding states, and so we have nothing but high hopes for the success of this program."

The Montana Department of Justice stated in an email that Montana is not a part of the DOJ's new project and none of the new positions will be based in the state. Furthermore, the email stated that the Montana DOJ disagrees with bringing more legal personnel onto the MMIP crisis.

"More lawyers are not the solution to the problem of missing and murdered indigenous persons in Montana," wrote Emilee Cantrell, the deputy communications director for the state's DOJ. "Ultimately, the federal government needs to fulfill its commitment to provide for public safety in Indian Country that is under federal jurisdiction."

In New Mexico, the program was announced during the state's Not Invisible Act Commission's public hearing by the U.S. Attorney Alexander M.M. Uballez and the DOJ. New Mexico is one of the districts that will receive one of the assistant U.S. attorneys that will also support the surrounding states including Arizona, Colorado, Nevada and Utah.

"This is really a culmination in fulfilling the promise that was made as part of the report on the executive order promoting public safety in the country to devote resources to address the issue of MMIP," said Marlys Big Eagle, the National Native American Outreach Services liaison for the Department of Justice in an interview with ICT.

"So, this is the ability for the department to have regional coordinators in regional U.S. cities that can work with tribal, federal, state, local law enforcement organizations and non-governmental organizations to try to aid in the prevention and response to MMIP issues," Big Eagle said.

The regional outreach program was established to assist with other initiatives set forth by the Department of Justice to further promote safety within Indian Country, such as the Executive Order 14053 and the Justice Department's National Native American Outreach Services liaison.

"The MMIP Program will liaise with and enhance the work of the department's tribal liaisons and Indian Country assistant United States attorneys throughout Indian Country, the Native American issues coordinator and the national Indian Country training initiative coordinator to ensure a comprehensive response to MMIP," the department's press release states. ●

Legislature Mulls Increasing Sick Leave

When the COVID-19 pandemic struck in 2020, California's three days of paid sick leave for full-time workers was not enough to cover quarantines or vaccine side effects. Gov. Gavin Newsom signed a law requiring companies to offer as much as 80 hours of supplemental sick leave for employees.

The temporary measure was restored in early 2022 due to the Omicron surge, but expired at the end of the year.

Now, advocates are urging state lawmakers to increase paid sick leave and expand who can receive it to promote public health and equity.

It's one of a series of bills before the Legislature that supporters say would improve work-life balance for Californians. Opponents, however, say the bills are an unreasonable burden to put on small businesses.

Newsom wouldn't say Monday whether he would sign the sick leave bill if it's passed. He did say that he broadly supports doing more for families, but also recognizes the cost.

"We have a parents' agenda, and paid sick leave is certainly part of that," he said after a bill signing event. "We look forward to doing more in the future. We just have to sort of balance those priorities against others in the short term."

Senate Bill 616 would raise the number of paid sick days that can be used by employees from three to seven days per year and expand how sick days are accrued and used. Under existing law, employees can accrue as many as seven days per year. This bill would increase the total to 14 days a year, and allow seven sick days to roll over to the next year, up from three days.

The bill, approved by the state Senate on a 27-9 vote and by an Assembly committee, is before the Assembly appropriations committee. Since being introduced, about 150 organizations have come out in support of the measure, while more than 60 groups oppose it.

According to the Washington Center for Equitable Growth, "paid sick leave guarantees are seen by many public health experts as one of the strongest tools in stopping the spread of infectious diseases," while the Economic Policy Institute finds that low-wage workers are particularly susceptible to having limited paid sick leave.

"COVID-19 presents a perfect example of why expanding paid sick leave is not simply good public policy, but a dire necessity," bill author Sen. Lena Gonzalez, a Long Beach Democrat, said in a statement included in the bill analysis. She added that "studies have found that, for those without earned sick days, missing three and a half days of work equates to losing a family's entire monthly grocery budget."

In 2014, California became the second state in the nation to adopt a paid sick leave policy, but now provides less paid sick leave than 15 states and many of its own cities, including San Diego, Los Angeles, San Francisco, Oakland and Berkeley.

The California Work & Family Coalition, a co-sponsor of the bill, argues that it is "a commonsense change ... ensuring that California workers do not have to choose between their health and paying the bills."

However, a coalition of organizations said in an opposition letter that many small businesses have not recovered from the pandemic and are now dealing with inflation.

The opposition coalition includes the California Chamber of Commerce, which has placed the bill on its 2023 "job killer" list because it "imposes new costs and leave requirements on employers of all sizes."

The chamber supported another bill, which failed in committee, that would have increased paid sick leave from three to five days — instead of seven — and would have allowed employers to ask for documentation from workers. "The more than 100 percent expansion is something that really not all businesses can afford to do," said Ben Golombek, the chamber's executive vice president for policy.

Jenya Cassidy, director of the Work & Family Coalition, says that depriving basic rights and dignity to workers should not be a strategy used by small businesses to grow.

"Your business grows when your workers can thrive, care for their families and care for themselves while keeping their jobs," Cassidy said in an interview. "We just need to normalize people not working themselves to death."

PG&E Announces Projects to Increase SoHum Capacity

Nearly one year after capacity issues impacting PG&E's ability to provide service to new customers from Fortuna to the Mendocino County border came to light, PG&E announced a pilot project on July 10 that could allow the utility to begin providing some new hookups in the Southern Humboldt area by the end of next year.

According to a news release, the project would utilize three Tesla Megapack batteries "to control voltage on an extended distribution line in rural Southern Humboldt."

PG&E emphasized the "proposed solution" was a pilot project that will require testing.

"PG&E will take a conservative approach to installing the system, testing it thoroughly and proving it can provide the increased capacity as designed prior to connecting customers," the release states.

Construction is slated to begin next year. Meanwhile, PG&E states it is also working on upgrades at the Garberville substation.

"The new battery system, along with the upgrades, could enable PG&E to begin serving some new customers by the end of 2024 and the remaining new business applications starting in 2027," the release states.

"We understand the real-world impacts that capacity constraints can have on our customers. This creative solution, in addition to the work we have already committed to, will help meet these capacity needs," Vice President of PG&E's North Coast Region Ron Richardson said in a news release.

For the Eel River Valley, PG&E states transmission, distribution and substation capacity upgrades are slated to be completed by the end of 2024.

"Additionally, planned system upgrades from Bridgeville to Alderpoint were approved to enable new business customers in that area to be in service by end of year 2026," the PG&E release states. "We identified transmission projects into Garberville that have since been approved by the CAISO, and incremental projects at the Garberville Substation that will increase capacity and ensure that new loads near the substation like the upcoming hospital upgrade can be served."

Those projects, according to PG&E, are currently on track.

Fungi for All Seasons

In puff pastry and quiche

Wild mushrooms and domestic Tater Tots join forces for a hearty quiche.

Here on California's Far North Coast, we're inundated with moisture, even during drought years. Having our foggy little corner at the bottom of the greater Pacific Northwest keeps us in an abundance of forest riches and changing menus as wild mushrooms stagger their seasons throughout the year. Finding these fungal forest treasures is thrilling — there's nothing quite like walking into a forest and coming out the other side with dinner (or brunch). If you took away all clocks and calendars, the most serious foragers could track the seasons by mushrooms alone.

The longer you forage, the more the seasonal cycles of this species or that become apparent, a sixth sense, perhaps. With spring snowmelt and higher temperatures, morels appear in the inland mountains and in lucky wood chip piles.

Shaggy manes emerge, abundant and short lived in all their inky goodness. The first flush of chanterelles — rainbow chanterelles, smaller and more colorful than their fall cousins — herald the start to summer.

The princes arrive shortly thereafter, scented strongly of sweet almond and shaming their store-bought cousins, the portobello and the cremini. When strikingly colored lobsters and hefty boletes arrive, they signal the later dog days of summer and the transition into fall when Pacific golden chanterelles in vast numbers always end up stealing the show. Even during years of drought and during months bereft of choice edibles, the blessed oyster mushroom happily grows in Humboldt all year long.

My favorite mushroom dishes are ones where they're the star; their meatiness lets me go meatless without feeling like I'm sacrificing heft or flavor. They let me eat in season and encourage me to hike — let me tell you, I'm never more excited for exercise than I am when it leads directly to food. During summer with potlucks and book clubs and tea parties, little savory bites of mushroom and Gruyère tarts are a delightful addition. And baking a big, mushroomy quiche on Sunday makes for easy breakfasts reheated and finished in the air fryer throughout the week.

Morel Quiche with Tater Tot Crust

This recipe is best made with morels, but chanterelles, hedgehogs, boletes and shaggy manes make excellent substitutions.

half the recommended time. Remove to a 9-inch pie pan and smash to form a crust (using the bottom of a mason jar helps). Return to the oven to bake for 12 minutes. Remove from the oven and set aside. Lower the oven temperature to 350 F.

While the tots are cooking, wash all the produce. Sauté morels in a dry pan over medium-high heat for a 2 minutes per side. Add cooking oil (avocado or olive oil works well), shallot, salt and pepper; stir until just browned. Stir in garlic and spinach until spinach is wilted. Remove from heat.

Take the par-cooked Tater Tot crust and evenly distribute chunks of chevre around the dish. Spoon the veggie mixture evenly around the dish. Whisk eggs, milk, salt and pepper well in a bowl and pour into the pie dish. Bake for 21-25 minutes, or until the quiche is set but moist. Remove from the oven and top with minced chives. Add some edible flowers, like borage or onion flowers, to make it look fancy. Slice and serve immediately.

Wild Mushroom Tarts

Chanterelles, hedgehogs and morels work best for this one.

Ingredients

- 3 cups wild mushrooms, button sized, whole or halved
  - 2 shallots, diced
  - 6 cloves garlic, minced
  - 2 tablespoons vegetable oil
  - 2 sheets (1 box) frozen puff pastry, thawed
  - 8 ounces Gruyère cheese, shredded
  - 8 sprigs fresh thyme, stemmed and roughly chopped
  - 1 egg, beaten with a splash of water
- Preheat oven to 425 F. Line a baking sheet with parchment paper. Whisk egg with a splash of water, then set aside. Sauté whole or halved wild mushrooms in a dry pan over medium-high heat. After 2 minutes, add oil, shallot, salt and pepper. Cook until translucent, then add garlic. Stir for 30 seconds, then remove from heat and set aside. Be careful not to overcook the mushroom mixture, as it will continue to cook in the oven with the puff pastry.

On a clean, lightly floured surface, roll out puff pastry sheets, one at a time, using a floured rolling pin. Roll out the dough until it increases in size by about 20-25 percent. Use a square biscuit cutter or a knife to cut the pastry into even squares. Using the back of a knife, score a half-inch-wide frame into each square (this will form a puffed crust for the tart); be sure not to cut all the way through the dough. Using a fork, poke a few holes in the inner square of the puff pastry (this will prevent the dough from rising and spilling the mushroom filling during baking). Transfer each square to the lined baking sheet, separated by an inch on all sides. Place in the fridge to keep the pastry cold and repeat the process with the second sheet.

With a small basting brush, paint the egg mixture onto the frame of each pastry square (this will make a nicely browned crust). Then, place a pinch of shredded Gruyère in the middle of each tart. Top with a spoonful of mushroom mixture, another pinch of Gruyère and a sprinkle of fresh thyme rubbed between your fingers. Bake until the pastry is golden brown and the cheese is melted, about 20 minutes. Serve immediately. ●

Jan Ramsey's Pilgrimage

By Louisa Rogers
artbeat@northcoastjournal.com

“I can’t remember not drawing,” Jan Ramsey says. She was the oldest of three kids and they’d sit in a circle and draw from books. Today, Ramsey sees art “as an extension of my life and my prayer.”

Ramsey is well known in Humboldt County for the many ways she’s brought art to the community: the art coaching she’s offered to kids in schools, the workshops she’s facilitated through Hospice of Humboldt using art to navigate grief and the Art for Life Studio she developed in 1995 through the Behavioral Health Branch of the Humboldt County Department of Health and Human Services to help adults with mental illness work as serious artists.

“I’ve been meeting with these folks for 30 years,” she says of the Art for Life Studio. “During COVID, we met in my carport.”

The impact of her guidance is all around. Paintings by Art for Life Studio members hang at the Humboldt County Courthouse, Eureka’s Open Door Community Health Center and the Humboldt Family Service Center. The group sold paintings through St. Alban’s Episcopal Church this winter to benefit people in Rio Dell who lost their homes due to earthquakes.

Los Bagels in Old Town has canvas murals painted by Ramsey and fourth graders from Equinox School (now Union Street Charter School).

Whatever age group she works with, she is also known for her open-hearted, encouraging style of teaching. When I told a friend I was about to interview Ramsey, her face lit up. “I still have the pastel my daughter painted 25 years ago in Jan’s class, when she was 6,” she said.

The Art for Life group is now the only one Ramsey still meets with regularly.

Ramsey says as she ages, she is teaching less and increasingly interested in art as a contemplative practice. She recently returned from a trip in which she was part of a group that planted 3,000 native trees at a Benedictine monastery in France, after which she painted icons in Assisi, Italy.

Ramsey is drawn to what she calls an “encounter,” which for her is more than just a conversation. It’s about listening deeply, to others and to oneself. “It’s the way I try to do art; it’s my language, it’s everyone’s. We’re born with images before we have words.”

While in Europe last winter, her first time there since before COVID, she says she was overjoyed to be a sojourner again, and wondered, “What am I called to do with these last chapters of my life? I want to see more clearly with less of ‘me’ so that more joy comes through my work, as I risk more and ‘fall upwards.’” Franciscan priest Richard Rohr, one of Ramsey’s mentors, coined this phrase, meaning that life’s messes and failures are to be embraced, since it’s often when our lives are in disarray that we’re open to profound change. “I have a great tolerance for making mistakes,” she says. “Participants in my workshops call these ‘happy accidents,’” as Bob Ross referred to them.

Ramsey’s mother began going blind in her 70s, a fact that haunted Ramsey when she recently turned 71. One way she coped with her fear was to build a 10-foot-by-26-foot light-filled tiny house on the footprint of the carriage house in the back of her garden. Rock Cottage, as she calls it, has a loft with windows and skylights. The fun of learning to live more simply helped balance her fear of change.

“The tiny house gives me so much joy that I feel I could sing and dance with love and abandon even in the darkness,” says Ramsey. She quotes the Shaker folk song, “Tis a Gift to Be Simple,” which ends with the line, “To turn, turn, will be my delight/ And by turning we come round right,” in the tiny house.

“I could turn and turn and not get lost or confused in this beautiful space,” she says, laughing. And on a practical level, she knows when she can’t live independently, she can hire a caregiver to live in the main house while she lives in the tiny one.

When her husband was diagnosed with melanoma in 1999, Ramsey began painting in sketchbooks. During his many treatments, when they were living for days in hospitals, her sketchbooks became her way of staying present and not trying to control things or worry about the future. “My work was to see deeply, with curiosity and gratitude, not fear.”

Ramsey was 52 when he died in 2004. She continued using sketchbooks as she grieved his death and redefined her life as a “walking pilgrim artist” whenever she could. She’s exhibited her large acrylic paintings made from her sketchbook watercolors of France, Germany, Norway and Italy. Her painting “Sanctuary Along the Dordogne,” with its French village rooftops and riverscape, won second place at the Humboldt Arts Council’s 2022 Member Exhibition in December.

Visitors can see Ramsey’s “Greet the Dawn,” a sunrise-toned painting with an elegant white bird at its center, in the narthex of St. Albans Episcopal Church in Sunnybrae. Another painting, “Ode to Redon,” is part of the new Redwood Art Association show.

Although she’s lived in Humboldt for 40 years and says the house she owns is the first place she’s ever felt truly at home, Ramsey doesn’t feel bound here. “I’m a pilgrim, not a settler. I like to explore, to see what’s out there.” She was recently accepted to go on an Irish pilgrimage honoring the late mystic John O’Donoghue in September. She’ll use her sketchbook to capture her experience in images and words.

“The immediacy and spontaneity of working in sketchbooks in unfamiliar territory is my favorite work,” she says. “Whether I’m painting from life or from feeling and imagination, the intimate format frees and contains my passion. I jokingly say that my sketchbook is my spouse.” ●

Eureka and Crescent City Top Ports for Halibut

By Kenny Priest

fishing@northcoastjournal.com

Anglers fishing out of Eureka and Crescent City enjoyed some of the best Pacific halibut fishing of the season this week. Both ports kicked out limits for boats willing to put in some time. And most days it didn't take much time. Out of Eureka, charters were loaded up and headed to the dock not long after dropping anchor, sometimes within an hour. That's some pretty good halibut fishing! And that's despite unfavorable tides and having to contend with those pesky black cod. The halibut fishery has really caught fire in Crescent City, where anglers are enjoying one of the best seasons anyone can remember. Ocean conditions have been great the last few days, and I'm sure that didn't hurt the cause. But there's little doubt the sea floor is covered in halibut right now. Eyeing the weather ahead and where we stand with the quota, you'll want to get in on the action before the end of the month. Or you may miss the boat.

Pacific halibut quota update

The CDFW has projected 21,454 net pounds of Pacific halibut have been harvested through July 2. In 2023, the Pacific halibut allocation for California is 39,520 pounds. The Pacific halibut fishery will run through Nov. 15 or until the quota is reached, whichever is earlier. To view the latest catch projection information, visit wildlife.ca.gov/conservation/marine/pacific-halibut#31670772-in-season-tracking.

The Oceans:

Eureka

According to Tim Klassen of Reel Steel Sport Fishing, the Pacific halibut bite is really good right now. "There seems to be a lot of fish out there, and some days the limits come quickly," he said. "Boats are catching from the Eel River north to the Mad. There are some small ones in the mix, 6 to 12 pounders, but there's also fish up to 80 pounds. The average is running right around 20 to 25 pounds. Herring is still a top producer. The black cod and Hake are thick out there, you'll need to check your bait every few minutes. The rockfish bite at Cape Mendocino has been excellent, though it's tough to get past the black rockfish as they are voracious. The lingcod bite continues to be on the slow side."

Trinidad

According to Tony Sepulveda of Shellback Sport Fishing, the Pacific halibut got a touch more elusive this week. "We still put fish on the boat every day we tried with plenty of good ones up to 60 pounds," said Sepulveda. "Limits of jumbo black rockfish went along with them. The negative tides made them a little fickle, but still no problem loading the boat. Out near Reading Rock produced limits of lingcod and rockfish every day we made the remote waters run. And the jumbo lings went on the hard chew late in the week. We had five over 20 pounds, topped by a 30-pounder Sunday, to go along with limits of jumbo rockfish and couple bonus 40-pound Pacific halibut."

Shelter Cove

"The rockfish bite continues to be wide-open," said Jake Mitchell of Sea Hawk Sport Fishing. "However, the lingcod bite is still slow. Most of the rockfish action is happening outside the Hat. The halibut bite has been slow this week."

Crescent City

"The Pacific halibut bite has been excellent, the best we've seen in a long time," said Britt Carson, of Crescent City's Amanda Weaver from Reno topped her Fourth of July holiday with a 57-pound Pacific halibut caught aboard the Shellback out of Trinidad.

Englund Marine. "Most of the boats are targeting the South Reef area in 230 to 280 feet of water. There's also been a few caught by anglers targeting rockfish near the North Reef. Both the rockfish and lingcod bite are still wide-open, with limits coming easily. The reefs along with the Sisters have been productive. The California halibut bite has been hit and miss. Not many coming from the rock wall, but the trollers are getting a few along South Beach. Razor clamming, which just opened back up last week, has been productive for the guys who know what they're doing." The daily bag limit for razor clams is 20 and the first 20 clams dug must be retained regardless of size or condition. The fishery in odd-numbered years is open north of Battery Point, Crescent City, in Del Norte County.

Blue Lake on Parade

Annie & Mary Day returns for 54th year

By Mark Larson
getout@northcoastjournal.com

Blue Lake lived up to its small town “center of the universe” status July 9 with its annual Annie & Mary Day parade and party to celebrate the historic Arcata and Mad River Rail Line and the A&M Railroad namesakes Annie Carroll and Mary Buckley, who worked as bookkeepers there back in the day. According to the city website, “Every year since 1967, the Blue Lake Chamber has sponsored Annie and Mary Day.”
The morning began under misting fog with the owners of a great mix of vintage vehicles in the Bill Nessler Car Show lined up along Railroad Avenue next to a bake sale for the Blue Lake Museum. Humboldt County’s most-fun parade, led by the volunteer fire department, then followed a loop through town, leaving a trail of tossed candy for attendees. The parade honored the self-described “Grand Marsh-mellows” (Terry and Jennifer Kramer, of Blue Lake) who walked with their cart of flowers while handing out seed packets.

They were followed by Blue Lake’s own

Old Crows and Ladies of the Lake, vintage giant puppets and masks from Dell’Arte, a huge “blue” float and giant bubbles from the Blue Lake Summer School, Shriners’ clown cars and music by Bandemonium and the Highlanders Pipe Band. And horses — lots of horses — plus a volunteer pooper-scooper to clean up after them.
The all-day festival wrapped in Perigot Park with craft vendors, beverages, barbecue and other food, and live music from Fickle Hill, Dead On, Cadillac Ranch and Checkered Past. ●

Once Upon a Time on the Couch

By Collin Yeo

music@northcoastjournal.com

Faced with a small amount of time to myself, I was doing the unthinkable the other day, sitting in my living room and watching a movie. I almost never watch films alone, as I prefer to read when I'm alone, and I like sharing television and movies with other people. Credit my late mother for this lingering habit from childhood, who was great at promoting both early literacy for me and family movie night. However, I saw that one of the streaming services I have access to features a film with, in my estimation, one of the greatest opening sequences of all time. The score by Ennio Morricone is a banger, too. I am of course referring to Sergio Leone's magnificent Once Upon a Time in the West.

Speaking of soundtracks, a byproduct of being a music writer — or perhaps more accurately, a music-obsessed writer — is that I can never ignore the score of a film or show, and often get a crazy yen to guess who the composer is. I was batting 1000 the other night, when, while watching the excellent HBO series Perry Mason with my favorite viewing partner, I was able to not only pick out the composer (New Orleans jazz great Terence Blanchard) but also guess the pre-war blues artist based on one song. It was Washington Phillips, a musician whose work originally caught my attention because of his unusual choice of backing instruments, the exact nature of which has been lost to time. They're basically some sort of autoharp or zither-like contraptions, with an eerie, tinkling sound that is as unique as it is other-worldly, trapped as it is in the dusky amber of 78 rpm discs forged in the 1920s. I recommend giving both artists a listen, the former still living and creating music, the latter long gone to his eternal reward, if you are looking for a little midsummer night music. Have a nice week.

Thursday

Local guitar picker, American primitivist and world music collector Oryan Peterson-Jones has two free shows in two days ahead of his band, Datura Blues, performing later this month at a festival in Northern Oregon. The first is a solo gig at Old Growth Cellars this evening at 6 p.m.

Friday

The Miniplex is hosting a free psyche and space jam night, as local post-punk and science fiction concept band Control Voltage, aka CV, shares the stage with the experimental collective Datura Blues, helmed by Oryan Peterson-Jones, who has press-ganged the author into making a rare appearance on bass, something I would do for very few people, I assure you. 9 p.m. In the interest of balanced reporting, if you'd care to spend your après Arts! Arcata enjoying music without my involvement, the Jam is hosting a reggae show with Bobby Hustle and Dread Kennedy. $10, doors at 8 p.m.

Saturday

Regular readers will notice that certain bands get a mention every time they roll through town. This is due to a group having done something to catch my attention in a profound enough fashion that I feel the desire to get as many people on board with the opportunity to see it live as is possible. I'm nothing if not a cheerleader for great live shows. One such act is The Pine Hill Haints, a spooky collective from Alabama, whose death country twang deals in apparitions and eldritch rural sermons from the sepia, cellulose and acetate times. They're playing a free one at the Shanty tonight at 9 p.m., where the musicians will be opening for themselves as The Invisible Teardrops, a Farfisa organ-led homage to '60s garage rock. Also on the bill are local bar rock heroes The Smashed Glass. This is gonna be a good one.

Sunday

Arcata Main Street is continuing its summer arts market

The Invisible Teardrops, an organ-led homage to '60s garage rock, will open for the familiar The Pine Hill Haints in a free Saturday show at the Shanty in Eureka.

and concert series on the Arcata Plaza today from 11 a.m. to 4 p.m. This afternoon's musical entertainment will be provided by Swingo Domingo, an act I have yet to hear, something I hope to rectify if the sun's out.

Afterward, in the same vicinity at 7 p.m., the Outer Space is hosting a pop and punk show, with Seattle's Dining Dead kicking it with locals Think Tank and Blub. This all-ages sober space has a mask requirement, and tonight's entertainment comes with a $5-$10 suggested sliding scale entrance fee.

Monday

One ongoing gig that has helped fill the live music dates in the lazy midsummer calendar slump is Savage Henry's Metal Mondays, an early-ish (7 p.m.) offering that is friendly to working headbangers of all stripes. Tonight's bill is all Humboldt talent, with metal bands Nail Gun and Midnight Mass hitting the volume knob with punk act Council of Vermin. $10 gets you in the door, and this all-ages show requires a valid I.D. to drink. Viva.

Tuesday

Seattle band Hell Baby is a who's-who of band members from the roster of boutique pop punk label Youth Riot! Records, including musicians from Mommy Long Legs, The Carols and Sleepover Club. The group is playing at the Siren's Song tonight, joined by labelmates Titanic 2 and local retro pop superstars Clean Girl and the Dirty Dishes. Eight is the lucky number, both regarding the time of the show and the number of dollars required to see it.

Wednesday

Circle Jerks are one of the foundational acts in the Los Angeles hardcore punk scene of the late 1970s and early '80s. In terms of inspiration for global punk culture and music that came afterward, they're on the shortlist of very important bands, and while its members have been busy with notable projects like "OFF!" and "Redd Kross," the 'Jerks have a discography of crucial tracks matched by very few contemporaries. Tonight the band is making a stop at the Arcata Theatre Lounge for a show I can only imagine will sell out, despite the somewhat elevated sticker price ($34 for advance tickets, $39 at the box office). 8 p.m.

Collin Yeo (he/him) sure hopes they used a real nuke in Oppenheimer, because at this point, why not? He lives in Arcata.

On tap this year is Mad Labs, a company showcase and mini-fest of experimental and original physical theater, Fun Under the Blue Lake Sun, a backyard carnival of games, with local vendors, food trucks and music, the Humboldt FolkLife Festival — offering a week of live music, a drag show and two touring shows. ## NCJ SCREENS

The Joy of the Ride

Joy Ride, The Out-Laws deliver the laughs

By John J. Bennett

screens@northcoastjournal.com

JOY RIDE. It has been rather widely reported — but may still be apocryphal — that at some point during the development of this screenplay, the writers (Cherry Chevapravatdumrong and Teresa Hsiao) thought to call it The Joy Fuck Club. Clearly, that title is a bit too outré for our provincial American sensibilities, but I like that it exists, even just in the ether. Joy Ride, as it is somewhat more timidly now known, does harken back a bit to the notions of intercontinental identity and family building explored in Amy Tan's work, but it refracts them through the cracked lens of two longtime Family Guy writers liberated by an R-rating to salt the sentimentality with big, broad jokes about sex and drugs.

In 1998, in the aptly named but perhaps underused Seattle suburb of White Hills, the Sullivans (Annie Mumolo and David Denman) trepidatiously approach the recently relocated Chens (Debbie Fan and Kenneth Liu) at a playground. Having been the only couple in White Hills with a Chinese child, they're almost too eager for their daughter Audrey (played in childhood and adolescence by Lennon Yee and Isla Rose Hall) to meet Lolo Chen, who is just the same age. Everyone is receptive, though, and the two girls begin a lifelong friendship of opposites.

Twenty-five years later, Audrey (Ashley Park) is a successful attorney and Lolo (Sherry Cola) makes highly sexualized art and lives rent-free in Audrey's detached garage. When the final negotiations with a powerful client require a trip to China, Audrey's buffoonish "ally" boss Frank (the great Timothy Simons) immediately suggests she go. She conscripts Lolo as translator, who in turn proffers an invitation to her cousin Deadeye (Sabrina Wu). After they've arrived in Beijing, the threesome connects with Audrey's college best friend Kat (Stephanie Hsu), now a major television star engaged to a kindly Christian from whom she has withheld the details of her sexual history (this becomes germane soon enough).

Audrey tries to muscle her way through a boozy meeting with her potential client, with Lolo and Kat constantly baiting one another about who's the better native speaker and bigger libertine, and Deadeye generally playing the lovable weirdo. Things get squirrely out of the gate, a drug dealer (Meredith Hagner) absconds with everybody's passports and tensions within the group mount proportionally to the craziness they get up to. Before long, Lolo's reminding convinces Audrey to attempt to locate her birth mother and the four friends drift, maybe irreparably, apart.

The directorial debut of Adele Lim (formerly a producer and writer best known for the screenplays for Crazy Rich Asians and Raya and the Last Dragon), represents a tentatively heartening example of pretty major studio money and access granted to a raunchy, heart-felt, gleefully half-dumb but ultimately well-crafted comedy by and about Asian American women. Crude as it is frequently sincere, Joy Ride can occasionally feel a little tonally uneven, but the relationships at the heart of the story, the questions of identity and belonging it explores are strong and, in their specificity, nearly universal. It's also a rambling, sex-positive sex comedy with less cynicism than most, and at least a couple of the big jokes are genuinely surprising. R. 92M. BROADWAY, MILL CREEK.

THE OUT-LAWS. About as highbrow as I'll get in discussing this particular comedy is to note the title references the magnificently goofy The In-Laws (1979), written by Andrew Bergman, directed by Arthur Hiller and starring Peter Falk and Alan Arkin in one of the all-time team ups.

The In-Laws, this ain't.

But I'm about as basic as they come, so even without the nod to a classic, I would still enjoy and endorse this latest Adam Devine vehicle, with a few caveats. Mainly: If one is not brought to tears by body-slams and testicle jokes, perhaps one should scroll on.

On the eve of their wedding, nebbishy but sweet bank manager Owen (Devine) and his yoga-instructor fiancée Parker (Nina Dobrev) learn that her parents, whom Owen has never met, intend to attend the nuptials. The parents in question turn out to be Billy and Lilly McDermott (Pierce Brosnan and Ellen Barkin), tough-talking, tougher drinking, leather-clad citizens of the world who are immediately terrifying and fascinating to Owen's polar opposite parents, played by Richard Kind and Julie Hagerty.

Watching Guy Fieri's handshake.

Shortly enough, Owen's bank is robbed, a federal agent of questionable acumen (Michael Rooker) arrives to investigate, and suspicions abound. This all builds to a series of delightfully stupid madcap capers gone wrong and then right (including a breathlessly hilarious depiction of self-induced agony from Dean Norris), all resolving into a too tidy but satisfying conclusion.

High art, hardly, but hilarious indeed, and perhaps most joyful for the dueling partnerships of Brosnan/Barkin and Kind/Hagerty, all of whom get the opportunity to make big, note-perfect swings at jokes and subtly lampoon their own on-screen personae. R. 95M. NETFLIX. ●

John J. Bennett (he/him) is a movie nerd who loves a good car chase.

NOW PLAYING

Free Will Astrology

Week of July 13, 2023

By Rob Brezsny
freewillastrology@freewillastrology.com

ARIES (March 21-April 19): Many astrologers enjoy meditating on the heavenly body Chiron. With an orbit between Saturn and Uranus, it is an anomalous object that has qualities of both a comet and a minor planet. Its name is derived from a character in ancient Greek myth: the wisest teacher and healer of all the centaurs. Chiron is now in the sign of Aries and will be there for a while. Let's invoke its symbolic power to inspire two quests in the coming months: 1. Seek a teacher who excites your love of life. 2. Seek a healer who alleviates any hurts that interfere with your love of life.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): It's high time for some high culture! You are in a phase to get rich benefits from reading Shakespeare, listening to Beethoven, and enjoying paintings by Matisse and Picasso. You'd also benefit lavishly from communing with the work of virtuosos like Mozart, Michelangelo, and novelist Haruki Murakami. However, I think you would garner even greater emotional treasures from reading Virginia Woolf, listening to Janelle Mon  e's music, and enjoying Georgia O'Keeffe's paintings. For extra credit, get cozy with the books of Simone Weil, listen to Patti Smith's music, and see Frida Kahlo's art. If you read between the lines here, you understand I'm telling you that the most excellent thing to do for your mental and spiritual health is to commune with brilliant women artists, writers and musicians.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): The French phrase j'ajoute (translated as "I adjust") is a chess term used when a player is about to adjust their pieces but does not yet intend to make a move. J'ajoute might be an apt motto for you to invoke in the coming days. You are not ready to make major shifts in the way you play the games you're involved in. But it's an excellent time to meditate on that prospect. You will gain clarity and refine your perspective if you tinker with and rearrange the overall look and feel of things.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): The Simpsons animated show has been on TV for 34 seasons. Ten-year-old Bart Simpson is one of the stars. He is a mischievous rascal who's ingenious in defying authority. Sometimes teachers catch him in his rebellious acts and punish him by making him write apologetic affirmations on the classroom blackboard. For example: "I will not strut around like I own the place. I will not obey the voices in my head. I will not express my feelings through chaos. I will not trade pants with others. I will not instigate revolution. I am not deliciously saucy. I cannot absolve sins. Hot dogs are not bookmarks." In accordance with your unruly astrological omens, Cancerian, I authorize you to do things Bart said he wouldn't do. You have a license to be deliciously saucy.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): Early in her career, Leo actor Lisa Kudrow endured disappointments. She auditioned for the TV show Saturday Night Live but wasn't chosen. She was cast as a main character in the TV show Frasier but was replaced during the filming of the pilot episode. A few months later, though, she landed a key role in the new TV show Friends. In retrospect, she was glad she got fired from Frasier so she could be available for Friends. Frasier was popular, but Friends was a super hit. Kudrow won numerous awards for her work on the show and rode her fame to a successful film career. Will there be a Frasier moment for you in the coming months, dear Leo? That's what I suspect. So keep the faith.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): The coming weeks will be a good time to seek helpful clues and guidance from your nightly dreams. Take steps to remember them — maybe keep a pen and notebook next to your bed. Here are a few possible dream scenes and their meanings. 1. A dream of planting a tree means you're primed to begin a project that will grow for years. 2. A dream of riding in a spaceship suggests you yearn to make your future come more alive in your life. 3. A dream of taking a long trip or standing on a mountaintop may signify you're ready to come to new conclusions about your life story. (PS: Even if you don't have these specific dreams, the interpretations I offered are still apt.)

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): In reviewing the life work of neurologist and author Oliver Sacks, critic Patricia Holt said he marveled at how "average people not only adapt to injury and disease but also create something transcendent out of a condition others call disability." Sacks specialized in collaborating with neurological patients who used their seeming debilitations "to uncover otherwise unknown resources and create lives of originality and innovation." I bring this up, Libra, because I suspect that in the coming months, you will have extra power to turn your apparent weaknesses or liabilities into assets.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): It's a mistake to believe we must ration our love as if we only have so much to offer. The fact is, the more love we give, the more we have available to give. As we tap into our deepest source of generosity, we discover we have greater reserves of it than we imagined. What I've just said is always true, but it's especially apropos for you right now. You are in a phase when you can dramatically expand your understanding of how many blessings you have to dole out.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Home computers didn't become common until the 1980s. During the previous decade, small start-up companies with adventurous experimenters did the grunt work that made the digital revolution possible. Many early adapters worked out of garages in the Silicon Valley area of Northern California. They preferred to devote their modest resources to the actual work rather than to fancy labs. I suspect the coming months will invite you to do something similar, Sagittarius: to be discerning about how you allocate your resources as you plan and implement your vigorous transformations.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): I'm tempted to call this upcoming chapter of your life story "The Partial Conquest of Loneliness." Other good titles might be "Restoration of Degraded Treasure" or "Turning a Confusing Triumph into a Gratifying One" or "Replacing a Mediocre Kind of Strength with the Right Kind." Can you guess that I foresee an exciting and productive time for you in the coming weeks? To best prepare, drop as many expectations and assumptions as you can so you will be fully available for the novel and sometimes surprising opportunities. Life will offer you fresh perspectives.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): By 1582, the inexact old Julian calendar used by the Western world for 13 centuries was out of whack because it had no leap years. The spring equinox was occurring too early, on March 10. Pope Gregory commissioned scientists who devised a more accurate way to account for the passage of time. The problem was that the new calendar needed a modification that required the day after October 4 to be October 15. Eleven days went missing — permanently. People were resentful and resistant, though eventually all of Europe made the conversion. In that spirit, Aquarius, I ask you to consider an adjustment that requires a shift in habits. It may be inconvenient at first, but will ultimately be good for you.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Piscean novelist Peter De Vries wrote, "Sometimes I write drunk and revise sober, and sometimes I write sober and revise drunk. But you have to have both elements in creation — the Apollonian and the Dionysian, or spontaneity and restraint, emotion and discipline." In the coming weeks, you Pisces folks will be skilled at weaving these modes as you practice what you love to do. You'll be a master of cultivating dynamic balance; a wizard of blending creativity and organization; a productive change-maker who fosters both structure and morale. ●

Amount of unpaid balance and other charges as of July 5, 2023: $387,933.76.

Beneficiary may elect to open bidding at a lesser amount.
The total amount secured by said instrument as of the time of initial publication of this notice is stated above, which includes the total amount of the unpaid balance (including accrued and unpaid interest) and reasonable estimated costs, expenses and advances at the time of initial publication of this notice.

NOTICE TO POTENTIAL BIDDERS: If you are considering bidding on this property lien, you should understand that there are risks involved in bidding at a trustee auction. You will be bidding on a lien, not on the property itself. Placing the highest bid at a trustee auction does not automatically entitle you to free and clear ownership of the property. You should also be aware that the lien being auctioned off may be a junior lien. If you are the highest bidder at the auction, you are or may be responsible for paying off all liens senior to the lien being auctioned off, before you can receive clear title to the property. You are encouraged to investigate the existence, priority, and size of outstanding liens that may exist on this property by contacting the county recorder's office or a title insurance company, either of which may charge you a fee for this information. If you consult either of these resources, you should be aware that the same lender may hold more than one mortgage or deed of trust on the property.

NOTICE TO PROPERTY OWNER: The sale date shown on this notice of sale may be postponed one or more times by the mortgagee, beneficiary, trustee, or a court, pursuant to Section 2924g of the California Civil Code. The law requires that information about trustee sale postponements be made available to you and to the public, as a courtesy to those not present at the sale. If you wish to learn whether your sale date has been postponed, and, if applicable, the rescheduled time and date for the sale of this property, you may call 707-444-9281, Attn: John S. Lopez, or visit this internet website www.harlandlaw.com using the file number assigned to this case 2023-003355. Information about postponements that are very short in duration or that occur close in time to the scheduled sale may not immediately be reflected in the telephone information or on the internet website. The best way to verify postponement information is to attend the scheduled sale.

NOTICE TO TENANT: You may have a right to purchase this property after the trustee auction pursuant to Section 2924m of the California Civil Code. If you are an "eligible tenant buyer," you can purchase the property if you match the last and highest bid placed at the trustee auction. If you are an "eligible bidder," you may be able to purchase the property if you exceed the last and highest bid placed at the trustee auction. There are three steps to exercising this right of purchase. First, 48 hours after the date of the trustee sale, you can call 707-444-9281, Attn: John S. Lopez, or visit this internet website www.harlandlaw.com using the file number assigned to this case 2023-003355 to find the date on which the trustee's sale was held, the amount of the last and highest bid, and the address of the trustee. Second, you must send a written notice of intent to place a bid so that the trustee receives it no more than 15 days after the trustee's sale. Third, you must submit a bid so that the trustee receives it no more than 45 days after the trustee's sale. If you think you may qualify as an "eligible tenant buyer" or "eligible bidder," you should consider contacting an attorney or appropriate real estate professional immediately for advice regarding this potential right to purchase.

President's Message

Since 1990 is how long the Fortuna Redwood AutoXpo has been bringing excitement to the fourth weekend in July. We are are happy with its success and would like to thank those who helped make it happen.

Special thanks go to all the merchants and professionals who generously donated goods for prizes and funds for trophies. Your continued cooperation and enthusiasm is gratefully appreciated. We also thank the media for their excellent cooperation and coverage.

Our "Friendly City" nickname is well earned and the atmosphere it creates for visitors during AutoXpo is often remarked upon by our participants. We appreciate what our community does in support of our event. The small army of volunteers, many of whom have helped all thirty-two years, always make us look good as they attend to the many tasks, not all of them fun, which are necessary to keep all our venues operating smoothly. From standing on a street corner during the Cruise on Friday, to helping with clean-up on Sunday night, we would be lost without our volunteers throughout the weekend. And, of course, an army is always looking for recruits, so if you, too, want to be overworked and under appreciated, give us a call at (707) 572-7855 and get your name on the list for next year.

We cannot say enough about the excellence and cooperation of our police and parks departments. They are always there for us to make our vision a reality. They anticipate our needs and deliver on our wishes.

So, thank you Fortuna, for being such a great place to be all the time, and an extraordinary place to be during AutoXpo.

— Ryan Walters, President, and the Fortuna Redwood
AutoXpo Committee

More Than Cars, Fortuna Redwood AutoXpo Has Many Activities Going On

Fortuna Redwood AutoXpo is all about cars, from hot rods to classic cars and trucks, newer model vehicles, and more.

You won't want to miss the Friday night cruise and Friday night dance, all the cars on display in downtown

Fortuna on Saturday, the Show and Shine vehicles on display at the Fortuna Union High School parking lot, and of course the winners, as they drive through Rohner Park Sunday morning to collect their awards.

AutoXpo Has Many Activities Going On

But there are many other, perhaps less well-known events that also take place during Fortuna redwood AutoXpo.

Fortuna's Rohner Park has plenty to see and do during Fortuna Redwood AutoXpo. There are the hit and miss antique gas engines and antique tractors on display. It is also where the artisan fair is held, where the swap meet and car corral is located, and where the tractor pull happens on Saturday, July 22nd.

In recent years, Fortuna Redwood AutoXpo has added, and will again have this year, the showing of a drive-in movie Saturday night in Rohner Park. The movie this year will be Grease, starring John Travolta and Olivia Newton-John. Admission is free to the drive-in movie and the showing begins at 8 p.m.

You might work up an appetite walking around downtown looking at all the vehicles. To grab a bite, stop by the food vendors at 13th and Main Streets.

Fortuna Redwood AutoXpo Committee president Ryan Walters said, "Our 'friendly city' nickname is well earned and the atmosphere it creates for our participants and visitors during our event is often remarked upon. We also appreciate what the community does in support of our event," he added.
